@wiczipedia Please be skeptical and verifier it because this picture is form marketing material of political party not statistical data

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · Nov 22
@kriswierzbicki yes, the graphic came from PO, but it underscores the fact that Poland has had growth where other nations haven't

In NYT op-ed, @PavloKlimkin hopes for continued strong US-Ukraine partnership under @realDonaldTrump, as do I. nytimes.com/2016/11/28/op...

Mr. Trump has said that the United States cannot do all the heavy lifting when it comes to supporting countries like Ukraine. I agree, and our government is working with our European partners to ensure they remain steadfast. But Ukraine does not ask for charity. My compatriots are dying every day. They die defending not only Ukraine but the universal democratic values and freedoms that are as precious to Ukrainians as they are to Americans.

I hope that under President Trump, not only the United States but the world will get strong leadership. I also hope that Ukraine will keep the steadfast friend and ally that we have been so grateful for during the difficult adolescence of our democracy.

Pavlo Klimkin is the foreign minister of Ukraine.

Mr. Trump has said that the United States cannot do all the heavy lifting when it comes to supporting countries like Ukraine. I agree, and our government is working with our European partners to ensure they remain steadfast. But Ukraine does not ask for charity. My compatriots are dying every day. They die defending not only Ukraine but the universal democratic values and freedoms that are as precious to Ukrainians as they are to Americans.

I hope that under President Trump, not only the United States but the world will get strong leadership. I also hope that Ukraine will keep the steadfast friend and ally that we have been so grateful for during the difficult adolescence of our democracy.

In NYT op-ed, @[illegible] hopes for continued strong US-Ukraine partnership under @realDonaldTrump, as do I. [illegible]…

Mr. Trump has said that the United States cannot do all the heavy lifting when it comes to supporting countries like Ukraine. I agree, and our government is working with our European partners to ensure they remain steadfast. But Ukraine does not ask for charity. My compatriots are dying every day. They die defending not only Ukraine but the universal democratic values and freedoms that are as precious to Ukrainians as they are to Americans.

I hope that under President Trump, not only the United States but the world will get strong leadership. I also hope that Ukraine will keep the steadfast friend and ally that we have been so grateful for during the difficult adolescence of our democracy.

Pavlo Klimkin is the foreign minister of Ukraine.

Fake news is a big deal. It requires a big response.

My latest for @washingtonpost's @DemocracyPost.
washingtonpost.com/news/democracy ...

There's nothing wrong with teaching governments to tell better stories and connect with people, but "stratcomms" have their limit. One thing they cannot and will not do is singlehandedly win the information war with Russia that we now find ourselves fighting. Gaining any ground in, let alone winning, this struggle will require a longer and more expensive investment than the establishment of another Twitter account dedicated to debunking. To be successful, Western governments need to focus on repairing the trust gap between citizens and media, and among citizens themselves.

Still seeing the video going around, so reupping this today.

Roy Moore graduated from West Point in the 1960s, when Russian language was NatSec priority.

The credible accusations that he is a child molester - not his Russian language "skills" - should be what worries us.

> should he meet

Big takeaway from @edwardlucas: we need to work out rules for online anonymity. Personal details need not be divulged, but there should be a real person behind accounts to "raise the tone of discussion, and make it harder for outsiders to interfere."

Couldn't agree more, anonymous, consequence-free commenting or posting garbage "news" on social media/online is a plague on us all.
You can invisibly say whatever you want to all, be divisive, cruel, slanderous. No one knows you. Understandable why newspapers got out of it.

@wobczpedia

Disturbing policy shift that I haven't seen discussed given today's news:

At Senate Appropriations hearing, Secretary of State Mike Pompeo would not commit to keeping Russia out of the G7 until the Minsk Agreements are fully implemented.

"I'm confident I could identify a set of trade-offs for you, where you'd agree that that was the right outcome as well." Pompeo told

The Trump administration is essentially discussing trading away Ukrainian sovereignty before Trump meets Putin next month

Take a look at how Russian press are reporting this.

The lede: "Donald Trump is sure Russia will return to the G7, even without the implementation of the Minsk Agreements."

Brokenhearted to see news out of my beloved Kyiv today about violence at a trans rights march.
My friend [illegible], a journalist covering the event, was punched in the face. Two young women were pepper sprayed

"You can't apply an open-source model to factchecking and journalism. You have to have experts. You can't just have Joe Schmo who thinks that the New York Times is a liberal rag, just because Trump says it's the enemy of the people."

This is ridiculous. Ambassador Yovanovitch is a career foreign servant who has served as Ambassador under Republicans and Democrats alike. She is not "Obama's" Ambassador in Ukraine any more than she was President Bush's in Kyrgyzstan or Armenia.

Today @facebook removed 1907 accounts linked to Russia. A "small number" were engaged in posts related to Ukraine.

How many is a "small number," exactly? How small is small, five days before a decisive first round presidential vote?

Boyko, trailing in the polls, promises to upend Ukraine's ban on Soviet films and Russian social networks VK and Odnoklassniki.

"A country cannot be free and democratic if it outlaws cult films that everyone loves," he said.

Poroshenko is clearly attempting to paint Zelenskiy as Russia's choice.

"Ukrainians put the Russian scenario to bed in the first round; I know they'll do it in the second, too."

Below, this video of Natalia Poklonskaya speaking positively about Zelenskiy is branded with a Zelenskiy team sticker.

I would label this as disinformation. It is deliberately misleading. An uneducated or simply busy viewer might think it is a legitimate Zelenskiy product.

Both campaigns & their supporters should not contribute to the already ripe environment for manipulation in Ukraine right now. It's fine to discuss why Poklonskaya might support Zelenskiy. But this sort of visual miscue is not okay. I'm disappointed by those who RT'd it.

Why dont you label as misleading the fact that Zelenskiy doesnt go to debate. no one knows anything about him or his campaign or what he thinks about

Hard to tell from the tea leaves, but praise for Zelenskiy from Poklonskaya reviled in Ukraine as a traitor could be interpreted as Kremlin support for Poroshenko, as with Boyko visit to Kremlin followed by suggestion of team up with Tymoshenko

Also could be reflexive control- this pro-Ze line that Ukrainians expect Russia to take- being able to criticize Ze on it adds uncertainty to the Ukr presidential election and benefits Russia

I would label this as disinformation. It is deliberately misleading. An uneducated or simply busy viewer might think it is a legitimate Zelenskiy product.

Both campaigns & their supporters should not contribute to the already ripe environment for manipulation in Ukraine right now It s fine to discuss why Poklonskaya might support Zelenskiy But this sort of visual miscue is not okay I m disappointed by those who RTd it.

Both campaigns & their supporters should not contribute to the already ripe environment for manipulation in Ukraine right now. It's fine to discuss why Poklonskaya might support Zelenskiy. But this sort of visual miscue is not okay. I'm disappointed by those who RTd it.

Below, this video of Natalia Poklonskaya speaking positively about Zelenskiy is branded with a Zelenskiy team sticker.

I would label this as disinformation. It is deliberately misleading. An uneducated or simply busy viewer might think it is a legitimate Zelenskiy product.

Hard to tell from the tea leaves, but praise for Zelenskiy from Poklonskaya reviled in Ukraine as a traitor could be interpreted as Kremlin support for Poroshenko, as with Boyko visit to Kremlin followed by suggestion of team up with Tymoshenko

The distant explosion you just heard was my head 🤯

THE SHOW IGNORES FACTS BECAUSE IT IS A PARODY OF REAL LIFE, NOT REALITY 🤦‍♀️

By ignoring all these facts, the show adopts Putin's narrative—one that he began expounding years ago and then perfected during the Euromaidan revolution. Russia was forced to occupy Crimea and invade southeastern Ukraine, he insists, in order to save the country from the supposedly fascist junta that had ousted pro-Russian President Viktor Yanukovych, threatened the lives of Ukraine's Russian speakers, and made plans to join the U.S.-led imperialist alliance known as NATO. The show effectively says Russians aren't to be blamed for any of the country's problems; blame Ukrainians, it argues, more specifically Ukrainian patriots who think they can rely on the West.

Would I like more detail on Zelenskiy's policies? Absolutely.

Should we do an in depth study of A COMEDY PROGRAM as if it is a policy document? Absolutely not.

"A COMEDY PROGRAM" that serves as a component of a presidential campaign is perhaps, not merely "A COMEDY PROGRAM", in my opinion.

I'd argue it is his central campaign material, especially season 3, so it should be analyzed alongside the other stuff he says on the actual campaign (like his emergent Russia hawkishness)

So I am through episode 1 of season 3 and the election is the worst thing to happen with Sluga Naroda, from a light hearted witty show it turned into an attack ad laden with lazy anti-Poro tropes. The war is alluded to with "you know what happened" between Russia and Ukraine

That heavy pro-Russian message isn't there yet, unless you count pervasive euroscepticism (which is partly based on how Europe courted Yanuk before 2013), even though all major politicians are pro-EU

Also the episodes are one hour long wtf

Episode 2: all similarities with real politicians are purely coincidental

I can't believe the NYT has fallen for this spin. Shokin sacked the only leading Ukrainian prosecutors interested in investigating Burisma, and Joe Biden did everyone a favour by forcing Poroshenko to get rid of him.

> Kenneth P. Vogel @kenvogel
> NEW: The BIDENS are entangled in a Ukrainian corruption scandal
> @JoeBiden pushed Ukraine to fire a prosecutor seen as corrupt
> BUT the prosecutor had opened a case into a company that was paying HUNTER BIDEN...

Alright, what gives @Facebook? I've noticed the quantity of ads in the #Ukraine ad library fluctuating for weeks.

5 days before the election, I wouldn't exactly call this "transparency."

Wish I could say I'm surprised that Trump has no idea what the Warsaw Uprising was

Aaron Rupar @atrupar
Completely beyond parody: Asked if he has a message for Poland on the anniversary of the Warsaw Uprising, Trump says "I have a lot of respect for Poland, and as you know the people of Poland like me. And I like them. And I'm going to be going to Poland

It's an excellent museum. Glad you were able to go! I was lucky to be in Warsaw yesterday; glad to have witnessed the commemorations in person

Doing this requires all of us — platforms, government, civil society, and the media — to work together. The more we tackle these problems, the more I see people from this list and elsewhere doing that. It's incredibly hard, but seeing everyone pulling together gives me hope

I agree with a lot in this op ed- we need more transparency on issues related to foreign interference. But the sentence below is misleading. The last two "tactics" did not happen in 2016; suggesting that they might "again" is going to further reduce confidence in our systems.

Most interesting bit is here- we worry so much about ads but so much inauthentic content is promoted through innocuous apolitical posts that people seek out voluntarily. This type of behavior is especially prevalent in Ukraine.

> Neither page was running ads during the audience growth peaks in December and April, which suggested the followers were not acquired through paid Facebook advertising. The Znaj page did not run ads at all, while the Politeka page launched its first ads — in the form of promoted posts — on September 2, 2019.

This behavior is embarassing to our country. It is destroying our credibility as an ally and supporter of democracy. And it is a slap in the face to Ukraine, which for the past 5+ years has been walking the long and difficult path of democratic reform.

What we should be doing right now is shoring up our alliance with Ukraine, figuring out how best American aid can be spent to ensure Ukraine's democratic transition is fruitful, and building bridges between the new administration and our country, not threatening to blow them up.

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 20m

Yes, all aid should come with preconditions. Yes, we should make sure our money is being spent correctly. Yes, we need to continue to push Ukraine to pursue anti-corruption measures. None of that includes strongarming our ally into doing political favors.

(It is notable that the aid was actually withheld for a time. This seems to suggest that the Zelenskyy administration held firm in not wading into murky American political waters.

Whether it was eventually released because Zelenskyy relented, because Adam Schiff got wind of this whistleblower complaint (as Cuomo suggests above), or simply because of the Congressional and public outcry about its freezing remains to be seen.)

The takeaway:

This behavior is embarassing to our country. It is destroying our credibility as an ally and supporter of democracy. And it is a slap in the face to Ukraine, which for the past 5+ years has been walking the long and difficult path of democratic reform.

What we should be doing right now is shoring up our alliance with Ukraine, figuring out how best American aid can be spent to ensure Ukraine's democratic transition is fruitful, and building bridges between the new administration and our country, not threatening to blow them up.

The whataboutist defense Mr. Giuliani makes in this clip re: other Presidents using aid as leverage is shameful. Threatening to withhold aid for failing to achieve necessary reforms is legitimate. Withholding it to sink your political opponent is not.

To forty-five million Ukrainians -- especially the thousands of troops on Ukraine's front lines, fighting a hot war with Russia -- that conversation about military aid matters a lot.

Ukraine and its budding democracy cannot be the casualty of our domestic political dogfight.

I think it is so, so important to have hobbies outside of work. My lifelong passion for theater has made me better at what I do. It also has given me an outlet during some stressful times. I'm incredibly grateful I still get to perform.

I also believe community theater provides a critical service by providing accessible art to all income levels and providing a space for people to gather and support one another- all too rare these days.

It upsets me to see people who I think should know better making glib, offhand comments that situate Ukraine as the castoff in their fantasy Trump-Putin love triangle.

Reality is more complex. And as a reminder, Ukraine is a sovereign nation of 45 million people, not a pawn.

I'm not a fan of Biden's candidacy, but seriously the Ukraine thing is made up. The prosecutor at the core of this fabricated scandal was notoriously corrupt. I recommend following @wiczpedia as someone who can help clear this up.

Thanks Natalia! I think my comments to Newshour on Friday clear this up. Also important to note that Biden was leading an international coalition to get Shokin removed. It's not like this was out of the blue.

That's pretty optimistic!

Eric Woods @EricWoods · 22m

I think that as an outsider Zelensky genuinely believes in his reform/anti corruption mandate. Why sully his political image and mandate, if Trump is out in a year?

I may be a bit naive on this, but that's a call I could see myself making in his shoes.

"Whether Ukraine is shaping up to be the Russia of 2020" is how "The Daily" frames the Ukraine whistleblower complaint story.

This framing is misleading at best. Why? The egregious behavior here isn't about a foreign country's bad behavior. It's about the President's.

True story: John Solomon featured in my Master's thesis a few years ago for his role in allowing Azerbaijan's lobbyists to whitewash the Azeri dictatorship without disclosing their financial ties

> John Solomon @jsolomonReports
> A Democratic US senator did to Ukraine's president what his party alleges Trump did: he tied future US aid for Kiev to the issue of investigating Joe Biden. Will the media care about these facts?

Simon does a good job chronicling the ups and downs of US policy on Ukraine in the Trump era in this thread. Surprised we haven't heard more about the removal of aid from the GOP platform in 2016 this week.

> Simon Rosenberg @SimonWDC
> 3/As Ukraine Affair has unfolded, kept returning to how we first became truly alarmed abt Trump's relationship w/Putin. It was at the GOP Convention, when Trump/Manafort gutted GOP commitment to provide Ukraine lethal weapons to fight Russia. Familiar? washingtonpost.com/opinions/globa...

If it was, someone miscalculated the strong bipartisan support for Ukraine on the Hill. If anything, I think that has redoubled these past few weeks. And I think the Zelensky administration has shown itself to be diplomatically deft as well.

It's something I'm struggling to help with! IMO it was deliberate to choose such a confounding and confusing case- if it's hard for experts to describe, laypeople don't really have a shot. One of the reasons it's so important to amplify those w/ experience in Ukraine.

I can't decide if this sounds like Zelenskyy or not. Parts do - I think he is deft at flattery and knows what Trump wants to hear. But we also have no reason to believe these remarks haven't been heavily edited.

If you don't believe the call transcript is accurate prove otherwise. If you can't then you are just rumor mongering.

action. According to information I received from White House officials, some officials voiced concerns internally that this would be an abuse of the system and was not consistent with the responsibilities of the Directorate for Intelligence Programs. According to White House officials I spoke with, this was "not the first time" under this Administration that a Presidential transcript was placed into this codeword-level system solely for the purpose of protecting politically sensitive—rather than national security sensitive—information.

Pretty clear from the complaint that the White House knew how damning this call would be and immediately set out to cover it up

I think Volker and Sondland come off looking a bit better here than they did in news reports where they were described more/less as having colluded with Giuliani, no?

UNCLASSIFIED

Starting in mid-May, I heard from multiple U.S. officials that they were deeply concerned by what they viewed as Mr. Giuliani's circumvention of national security decisionmaking processes to engage with Ukrainian officials and relay messages back and forth between Kyiv and the President. These officials also told me:

- that State Department officials, including Ambassadors Volker and Sondland, had spoken with Mr. Giuliani in an attempt to "contain the damage" to U.S. national security; and
- that Ambassadors Volker and Sondland during this time period met with members of the new Ukrainian administration and, in addition to discussing policy matters, sought to help Ukrainian leaders understand and respond to the differing messages they were receiving from official U.S. channels on the one hand, and from Mr. Giuliani on the other.

I am surprised the whistleblower complaint refers directly to Lutsenko, the prosecutor who followed Shokin (who was fired after prodding from the international community).

Because Trump's mention of the prosecutor is directly followed by mentions of Biden, I assumed he was referring to Shokin, not Lutsenko. The repeated emphasis on Lutsenko in the complaint makes me wonder whether the whistleblower had info that isn't in the rough transcript.

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia 17m

That being said, if Trump was referring to Lutsenko, it appears Zelenskyy didn't care- Lutsenko was fired in late August.

Fantastic investigation from and showing how troll operations masquerading as PR companies try to manipulate online opinions about Ukrainian politicians. This part also illustrates which populations are targeted

> During a 7-hour shift, Bidun was expected to produce around 300 comments, posted either on the politicians' personal Facebook pages or under posts of articles published by popular Ukrainian news sites. He was advised to write quickly to meet the quota, without worrying too much about grammar. "People in the real world aren't that educated," a manager explained. "So if you write with grammar mistakes, this may even be a positive thing."

On Giuliani's latest tweet, important clarification from @JonahFisherBBC. Also, highly ironic that the Trump admin suddenly understands the guy they trusted over our Ambassador is highly corrupt. As was the guy that came before him. None of that negates Biden's efforts though.

Try a little harder. His name is Volodymyr.

Since her departure, that scandal has been replaced by a new one: Hill resigned her post just seven days before Trump made a fateful call to Ukrainian President Vlodymyr Zelensky, a conversation that has embroiled him in a deepening impeachment inquiry. Her story as an unlikely Trump adviser, examined in depth for the first time here, is emblematic of the tension facing so many national security experts between their personal ambitions and their sense of duty.

1) I'm not sure anyone ever said breaking up tech companies would solve election interference. The core argument is related to user privacy. Also, the cross-platform coordination on monitoring and takedowns that we've seen so far has been lacking, IMO.

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia 6m

2) I'm glad Facebook is spending more on safety, but a large investment doesn't necessarily mean that investment is being channeled correctly.

1. I'm not sure anyone ever said breaking up tech companies would solve election interference. The core argument is related to user privacy. Also, the cross-platform coordination on monitoring and takedowns that we've seen so far has been lacking, IMO

2. I'm glad Facebook is spending more on safety, but a large investment doesn't necessarily mean that investment is being channeled correctly.

3. Again, we see a disappointing disregard for Facebook's largest markets (many of which are non-white, non-Western) in Zuckerberg's comments about where he respond to requests to testify. It's natural that many governments want to hear from him. He should be accountable to them.

Naveed Jamali @NaveedAJamali · 43m

Now that we know that Zelensky was under pressure from Trump and that Mandell was part of establishing this story, can you say definitively there is nothing here? I would've dismissed it too, but for the whistleblower memo and the pieces coming together of Trump pushing UKR.

Naveed Jamali @NaveedAJamali · 42m

Nonetheless, it begs what was her role, and how come NYT didn't address it?

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia Follow

Replying to

The story was published before she was appointed and afaik NYT did issue a statement. Her role was a stringer- collecting facts and on the ground reporting that are shaped into a larger narrative by the newsroom. I really don't think there's intrigue here.

His English is far from fluent and on a phone call as opposed to an in person presser or meeting would be far more likely to use an interpreter. Phone calls - especially those that involve techical terms - are really hard in foreign languages.

The intrepid @oneunderscore got to the bottom of the CrowdStrike conspiracy theory, one of many swirling around Ukraine right now.

As I told him, "The more complicated you make it, the harder it is to figure out. And sometimes that's the point."

And why, then, did Zelenskyy administration officials tell Confressional staffers visiting Ukraine they felt pressured to investigate the Bidens and that the withholding of aid wasn't unrelated?

For those of us who watched this smear campaign unfold from Kyiv, the Ambassador's removal was a disappointment but not a surprise — and the motivation was immediately clear.

Dustin Volz

NEW: Trump ordered the removal of the ambassador to Ukraine after months of complaints from allies outside the administration, including Rudy Giuliani, that she was undermining him abroad and obstructing efforts to persuade Kyiv to investigate Biden wsj.com/articles/trump

In one, he assailed a "fake news smear" being pushed against Ms. Yovanovitch by conservative media personalities allied with Mr. Trump. Oh good, another conspiracy theory added to the mix.

By my count, here are the completely unfounded disinformation narratives we've seen so far:

1. Ukraine colluded with the Democrats
2. Ukraine has 'the servers'
3. Amb Yovanovitch purportedly "anti Trump"
4. The Biden theory

My career so far had been dedicated to supporting democratic activists in Central and Eastern Europe, and clearly what was going on in Ukraine would reverberate across the region. My Fulbright grant was a small part of US efforts to promote American values in the country. 4/

Really, what ended up happening was that my own commitment to democratic values was strengthened every day by watching my dedicated Ukrainian colleagues at work. They were paid little and worked long hours. 5/

No, we have a problem with a company taking money to serve lies directly to the people who will find them most appealing.

So would the answer be no political advertising on Facebook at all? Because a cap per candidate would not help with the truth problem

I'm not set against the idea of no political advertising on Facebook, but wonder whether it might skew the information environment for voters in other ways which are also problematic - e.g. particular demographics which get more news from FB will be less aware

So it really makes more sense for us to close that loophole, find a framework for factual accuracy in political advertising and an independent enforcement mechanism across traditional and digital media. We need honesty, but we also don't need Facebook making those calls.

misinformation or hate speech on our platform, they will be removed from Facebook News. We have intentionally created a section within News for top stories that will be curated by a team of seasoned journalists led by Pulitzer Prize winner Anne Kornblut. This team will focus on making sure news from top publishers who are investing in original reporting will appear at the top of the tab. A more diverse set of news organizations on the left and right will appear in the personalized section. The publishers included here are likely to change as we work to improve the product in advance of a public launch early next year. There will invariably be news organizations, ideological or otherwise, who say or write things that I find abhorrent, but I will always stand by their right to express their views. It has been a long held American ideal that we win the day with better arguments, not by silencing those we disagree with. And especially in today's hyper-partisan political environment, it is critical that we hold onto the values that make our country different and special. Mark's strong defense of free speech has made me incredibly

I think it's really significant that @twitter decided to make ban political ads globally. Too often these US-based companies are willfully ignorant about the ills their products cause abroad. Political ads are problematic outside of our borders, too.

1. No, twitter ads aren't nearly as important or impactful as those on Facebook. I don't view it as solving the problem, I view it as norm setting, much like retaliatory sanctions for the Crimea annexation. Will they get the peninsula back? No. But they establish & enforce rules.

This piece looks at the Ukrainian perspective on the impeachment scandal. A few new details, but this is just incorrect- Zelensky's victory was not a surprise to anyone even cursorily watching Ukraine.

Trump has argued that there could be no quid pro quo with Ukraine because Kyiv didn't know about the aid freeze. Yet it was clear that Kyiv was under pressure from its vital patron well before Zelenskiy, a lawyer turned actor and producer, took office.

At the time of Zelenskiy's surprise landslide victory in April, Trump's personal lawyer, Rudy Giuliani, had already called for an investigation into the Bidens' dealings in Ukraine and allegations that Ukraine helped Trump's opponent, Hillary Clinton.

Amb Yovanovitch suggests that Lutsenko and Poroshenko were hoping that Giuliani would shore up support for the flagging Poro administration w/ President Trump (pg 46)

A Because I think that they were hoping that so in the case of Mr Lutsenko I think he was hoping that Mr Giuliani would open doors for him in Washington I think that he was also hoping in the early period -- you need to remember that this was during presidential elections in Ukraine And President Poroshenko the polling numbers were not good for him

And so I think there was always a hope that President Trump would endorse President Poroshenko And so this is something that President Poroshenko wanted And I think Lutsenko Mr Lutsenko was hoping that maybe, as a result of providing information that is of interest to Mr Giuliani that maybe there could be an endorsement

So this is a new detail. Amb Y was asked to return to the US THREE DAYS after Zelensky's election. This is absurd. The US needs to telegraph continuity in the days after a major vote in any country, particularly in Ukraine where transitions haven't historically been smooth

Q We left off a little bit on the April 21st call between President Zelensky and President Trump right after President Zelensky won the election, and you said you got a general readout of the call afterwards. Who did you speak to to get that readout?

A I don't recall. I don't recall. And when I say "general," I mean really general. It was a good call, they hit it off.

Q Did you speak to any Ukrainian officials about the call?

A I don't recall, because I mean, that happened on a Sunday night. On Wednesday night I got the call to return to the United States. So there wasn't a lot of time in there.

Q Okay. So let's move into that, then. It was just 3 days after that call that you got a call to go back to the States?

This is the core of what many Ukraine watchers have been asking since the beginning of this whole ordeal.

twitter.com/wiczipedia/sta ...

A I was upset. And I, you know, I wanted an explanation because this is rather unusual. But he could not offer one beyond the fact that the President had made a decision. And it is the President's to make, as we know.

I did ask him though, you know, what does this mean for our foreign policy? What does it mean for our position on anticorruption? What message are we sending to the Ukrainians, to the world? How were, you know, I mean, beyond me, how were we going to explain this? And what are we going to say, you know, not only to the people at U.S. Embassy Kyiv, but more broadly to the State Department?

And I told him I thought that this was a dangerous precedent, that as far as I could tell, since I didn't have any other explanation, that private interests and people who don't like a particular American ambassador could combine to, you know, find somebody who was more suitable for their interests. That, you know, it should be the State ROFLMAO. Yovanovitch is an Obama remnant. She was pushing Ukrainians to dig dirt on Trump and prevent prosecution of Dem operatives in Ukraine.

It's all over Ukrainian media, among other places, which I read and none of you Democraps does.

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia

This is ridiculous. Ambassador Yovanovitch is a career foreign servant who has served as Ambassador under Republicans and Democrats alike. She is not "Obama's" Ambassador in Ukraine any more than she was President Bush's in Kyrgyzstan or Armenia.

Repetitive and frustrating exchange between minority staff and Amb Y. Minority staff trying to advance "Ukraine collusion" narrative based on kangaroo court convictions, Amb Y just not having it.

Prosecutor General Lutsenko, motivated by self-preservation, attempted to cozy up to the Trump admin by dangling dirt on Biden et al (pg 34)

My opinion of Prosecutor General Lutsenko was that he was acting in a self-serving manner, frankly making things up in order to appear important to the United States, because he wanted to save his job. He was on his way out with the election of a new President. You could read the writing on the wall. This was before Zelensky was elected, but you could see the wave of popularity.

He had been put in place by the former President, Petro Poroshenko. I think there were a couple motivations to this, but I think most important was that he would stay in office, probably to prevent investigations into himself for things that he may have done as prosecutor general.

And so by making himself seem important and valuable to the United States, the United States then might object or prevent him from being removed by the new President.

Now imagine this happening the world over.

Q That's RG in the text message?

A Yes. RG is Rudy Giuliani, yes.

The Zelensky-POTUS meeting will not happen. Advice?

And I responded, Kurt Volker: Good grief, please tell Vadym to let the official USG representatives speak for the U.S. Lutsenko has his own self interest here. And this is what we discussed earlier.

Q And please continue.

Plain and simple: Giuliani's backchannel foreign policy undermined official USG representatives and caused confusion in Ukrainian administration

Now imagine this happening the world over

      A    Just had a meeting with Andriy and Vadym. Very concerned about what Lutsenko told them. That according to Rudy Giuliani --
      Q    That's RG in the text message?
      A    Yes. RG is Rudy Giuliani, yes.
      The Zelensky-POTUS meeting will not happen. Advice?
      And I responded, Kurt Volker: Good grief, please tell Vadym to let the official USG representatives speak for the U.S. Lutsenko has his own self-interest here. And this is what we discussed earlier.
      Q    And please continue.
      A    Okay.
      Bill Taylor: Exactly what I told them.

Shokin fired, but the motivations for that are entirely different from those contained in that allegation.

Q That were pushed by Prosecutor General Lutsenko --

A Correct.

Q -- and adopted by John Solomon in The Hill and then repeated on televised news?

A Correct. When Vice President Biden made those representations to President Poroshenko, he was representing U.S. policy at the time. And it was a general assumption -- I was not doing U.S. policy at the time -- but a general assumption among the European Union, France, Germany, American diplomats, U.K., that Shokin was not doing his job.

Giuliani told Volker: if a statement on anti-corruption efforts by Zelensky "doesn't say Burjsma and if it doesn't say 2016, what does it mean?"

Really shallow, misguided view of the new administration's efforts, and intentionally backs the Zelensky admin into a corner.

Rudy says, well, if it doesn't say Burisma and if it doesn't say 2016, what does it mean? You know, it's not credible. You know, they're hiding something.

And so we talked and I said: So what you're saying is just at the end of the ... same statement, just insert Burisma and 2016, you think that would be more credible?

And he said: Yes.

So I sent that back to Andriy, conveyed the conversation with him -- because he had spoken with Rudy prior to that, not me -- conveyed the conversation, and Andriy said that he was not ... he did not think this was a good idea, and I

So much for continuity. Thanks to this scandal, lost one Ambassador to Ukraine, Special Rep to Ukraine, and Ambassador to EU, all of whom had been key conduits of info and reps of US policy. Thank God Bill Taylor is still at post and involved.

One thing I keep thinking about is that many of the men in this inquiry seem to be counting on the silence and compliance of women to keep their bad behavior under wraps.

With Yovanovitch and Hill, that was clearly a huge miscalculation, as it should be across the board.

Interesting detail: Taylor noticed the lack of congratulatory letter to Zelensky on his victory. The election was April 21. The letter was issued over a month later after his objection (and during his ostensible job interview). One of many events when USG stayed quiet on Ukraine.

Q What ultimately led you to take the job?

A The Secretary's assurance that he would continue that strong support and that he would continue to push that strong support within the government. And frankly one of my concerns had been that there had not been a letter to President Zelensky congratulating him on his victory. And Secretary Pompeo looked over at Counselor Brechbuhl and said, what, no letter? And within 48 hours there was a letter. Now -- and it was a good letter -- it's the letter I mentioned in my statement that congratulated President Zelensky and invited him to a meeting in Washington.

Q Okay. That was the May 29th letter that you referenced?

No doubt in Taylor's mind that the White House meeting was conditioned on Zelensky's agreement to "pursue investigations" into Burisma and the Bidens

Q And is it your view that by this point the White House meeting between President Zelensky and President Trump was conditioned on the initiation of these investigations by Ukraine?

A I am sure that happened based on all the things I said. So Mr. Goldman, you asked me did I know it at that point or on 7/25?

Q Right.

A The answer must be yes, yeah. I knew it in July. It became clearer and clearer.

Q And what you can you tell us about other oligarchs that might allegedly be involved with corruption in Ukraine?
A A general question okay
Q Is it an issue?
A It's a big issue It's a big issue And it's particularly a big issue today with this new administration The one problem the one concern, the one issue that we have the U.S. Government and the international community more broadly with this administration with the Zelensky administration is the influence of oligarchs

Sorry, for those of you who see a tweet about this every day, but the shadow foreign policy conducted by Giuliani et al greatly undermines our diplomats' ability to do their jobs, not to mention their credibility. Case. in. point.

THE CHAIRMAN: So when you're asked about this by Mr. Yermak on August 29th, you're embarrassed because you hadn't been able to get an answer as to why the aid was withheld and you felt it desperately ought to be provided.

AMBASSADOR TAYLOR: I'm a representative of the United States Government out there, and he asked me a perfectly legitimate question, why are you holding up this assistance, and I couldn't tell him.

Interesting- Taylor contradicts Volker's assessment that the meeting @ NSC was "too in the weeds," says Bolton appreciated Danylyuk's substance, suggesting that perhaps the reason was described as going poorly is because Bolton stormed out when "investigations" were mentioned

Q Did anyone relate to you that Danyliuk was getting way into the weeds with Ambassador Bolton and it was not a long meeting in

A No, no. Actually, it was -- no. What I heard from Vindman and Hill was that the first part of that meeting went well. Substantive discussions, security, national security, both sides, energy security.

And apparently, according to them, their boss, John Bolton, was appreciating the substance of that meeting. And in their description, when Ambassador Sondland raised investigations in the meeting, that triggered Ambassador Bolton's antenna, political antenna, and he said, we don't do politics here.

So the answer is that, even after the statement that I heard both times from both recollections, recitations, descriptions of the phone call, after the quid pro quo, there is none, there is none, there is none, then it went on, both conversations went on to say, But President Trump did insist that President Zelensky go to a microphone and say he is opening investigations of Biden and 2016, and President Zelensky should want to do this himself. George Kent's deposition has been released. You can find it and key excerpts here: intelligence.house.gov/news/documents ...

Notable for Ukraine watchers: he testifies that Porokhobots were attacking him and Amb Y as the scandal started in late March 🧐

A. Well, in Ukraine, very clearly, the prosecutor general at the time, Yuriy Lutsenko, his press spokeswoman retweeted the tweet of Don Trump, Jr. attacking the Ambassador. So very clearly it wasn't just him personally as a Ukrainian, but the institution. There were -- I made references earlier to what were known as the Porokhobots, the trolls on social media who were active in support of Poroshenko. And 10 days before the election, rather than attacking Russia or attacking his political opponents, as they normally did, they were attacking Ambassador Yovanovitch and me by name. So I would say that is [the] cluster of the Ukrainians who were actively promoting this campaign. And then obviously the people in the United States that were promoting it.

Our career diplomats -- people with decades of experience in Ukraine and the wider region -- were told to stand down from their official duties because of attacks from private individuals who were part of a shadow foreign policy.

After Rudy Giuliani attacked Ambassador Taylor, Under Secretary of State David Hale warned him to "keep my head down and lower my profile in Ukraine." (Page 249-250)

Q Did you have any discussions with anyone else at the State Department by mid-July, and time up to mid-July or prior to, about Mr. Giuliani's potential influence on the President and the fact that what he was advocating may be contrary to official U.S. policy?
A I did not, in part because after Giuliani attacked me, as well as Ambassador Yovanovitch and the entire embassy, in his late May interview, I was told to keep my head down and lower my profile in Ukraine.

Our career diplomats -- people with decades of experience in Ukraine and the wider region -- were told to stand down from their official duties because of attacks from private individuals who were part of a shadow foreign policy.

After Rudy Giuliani attacked Ambassador Taylor, Under Secretary of State David Hale warned him to "keep my head down and lower my profile in Ukraine." (Page 249-250)

Q Did you have any discussions with anyone else at the State Department by mid-July, and time up to mid-July or prior to, about Mr. Giuliani's potential influence on the President and the fact that what he was advocating may be contrary to official U.S. policy?

A I did not, in part because after Giuliani attacked me, as well as Ambassador Yovanovitch and the entire embassy, in his late May interview, I was told to keep my head down and lower my profile in Ukraine.

Goodness, I've only tangentially studied Ukraine and it's even irksome for me! The piece is just golden

I think that's probably a step too far for the point Chris was trying to make, which is, as I understood it: try a little harder, everyone.

Question is, has American coverage of Ukraine ever been adequate? Not saying this as an outsider, but as part of the problem. From the US perspective, there is government and there is media. From Ukraine's, it's Americans messing everything up

We ignore most of the rest of the world at our own peril every single day. I'm not arguing with that. But I also don't think that ignorance is necessarily connected to US mishandling of the region- this scandal has a lot of experts involved who were simply shut out of policymaking

Policymaking is directly linked to the grotesque depiction of reality provided by media, especially when media outlets are only interested in foreign affairs insofar they can be fitted, however clumsily, into domestic agenda.

Yeah, fair enough. But American media culture is a big reason for America's political meltdown, which Ukraine is left to deal with on its own, while also dealing with Russia's insanity Victory Day is a huge holiday for Russia, and it plays an important role in the narrative of Russia's resurgence as a global power. Trump's attendance would be an endorsement of that position.

I haven't read the bill and your description of it is really limited to one sentence

"The legislation would require disclosure on online political ads so that voters can understand who is targeting them, why they were targeted and how much an advertiser spent to do so."

Fusilli Spock @awstar11 · 14m

I'm loathe to invite more government regulations into speech (especially political speech). If you want me to consider the merits of the bill, please add pro's & con's so I can judge and it would have to be compelling!

Otherwise, my answer is, "Congress shall pass no law..."

Preach, Fiona, preach.

Look, and I'm sorry to get testy about, you know, this back and forth, because I'm really worried about these conspiracy theories, and I'm worried that all of you are going to go down a rabbit hole, you know, looking for things that are not going to be at all helpful to the American people or to our future election in 2020.

You just had the Senate report coming out informing us all yet again, a bipartisan, nonpartisan report from the Senate about the risk that there is to our elections. If we have people running around chasing rabbit holes because Rudy Giuliani or others have been feeding information to The Hill, Politico, we are not going to be prepared as a country to push back on this again. The Russians thrive on misinformation and disinformation.

And I just want to say that that was the reason that I went into the administration when I was asked by General Flynn, K.T. MacFarland, and General Kellogg. We're in peril as a democracy because of other people interfering here.

And let me be clear, I mean POTUS in the general sense. No POTUS should make such a statement. Whether Americans "care" about our country does not always inform what's in our national security or foreign policy interests.

Despite the preferred imagery of most major news outlets that cover Russia - hammer and sickles, red and black color palettes, and misappropriations of the colorful onion domes of St Basil's Cathedral as "the Kremlin." Russia's information war is distinct from the one its Soviet predecessor waged

Kent underlines how he and others in the State Dept attempted not to shield Burisma/Zlochevskiy, but to "hold them to account."

No one in the USG was ever shielding corrupt officials/orgs, which were holding back Ukraine from democratic reform, a key foreign policy goal for US.

Kent says we are the better for the immigrants among the ranks of our public servants like Yovanovitch, Vindman, and Hill. He invokes the spirit of patriots like Brzezinski, Kosciuszko (in beautiful Polish too!) Rochambeau, Lafayette

Jim Jordan is arguing that because the Ukrainians eventually got their aid and they never announced "investigations" that nothing bad ever happened in the run up to that.

Taylor: "While the aid was on hold, we shook the confidence of a close partner in our reliability."

This is the underpinning of why making aid contingent on political investigations is so upsetting to public servants. It is an endangerment to our national security.

Mr. Stewart trying to blame the war in Ukraine on the Obama administration, somehow. Also says that "Javelins kill Russian tanks" which is an exaggeration. They are more of a rhetorical deterrant at this point.

Russians pronounce it KEY ev. (Most Americans learned the pronunciation in the Soviet era.)

Ukrainians pronounce it KEEV

It's a matter of Ukrainian patriotism to reject the Russian pronunciation.

And now Stefanik is doubling down on the "Trump provided javelins that are effective at neutralizing Russian tanks" narrative...

Christopher Miller @ChristopherJM
Not one single Javelin has been used on the battlefield in east Ukraine, let alone to "kill Russian tanks." The Javelin systems/missiles are stored in strategic locations around Ukriane that border Russia and territories it occupies or controls, including Crimea and Transnistria.

And now Stefanik is doubling down on the "Trump provided javelins that are effective at neutralizing Russian tanks" narrative

> Christopher Miller @ChristopherJM
> Not one single Javelin has been used on the battlefield in east Ukraine, let alone to "kill Russian tanks." The Javelin systems/missiles are stored in strategic locations around Ukriane that border Russia and territories it occupies or controls, including Crimea and Transnistria.

The attempt by the Republicans to say "we have been supporting Ukraine during this administration so there is no wrongdoing here" is so misleading.

That all of that aid was put on the line for political purposes is the problem.

Taylor says "The Russians always look for vulnerabilities" and would have taken the halting of aid as one such vulnerability as Zelensky headed into negotiations to end the war

Mr. Stewart trying to blame the war in Ukraine on the Obama administration, somehow. Also says that "Javelins kill Russian tanks" which is an exaggeration. They are more of a rhetorical deterrant at this point.

According to this video, the initial "ih" sound from "и" in "Київ" is almost more like an "eh" sound

Thomas A. Fine @thomasafine · 23m

The vowel sound can drop a bit into the back of the mouth or throat, although this video seems an overly exaggerated version of that. More like a Russian "ы" sound

It makes me so sad to see this. The people who are testifying this week are public servants. They do not want to be on live TV testifying in front of the entire country. They are not partisans. They care about the United States and they care about the US-Ukraine relationship.

And now Devin Nunes is smearing two career public servants, experts on democracy, diplomacy, and Ukraine – Taylor and Kent – as "actors" in a "low-grade sequel" to the "Russia hoax."

Taylor reminds Congress and the nation that the war in #Ukraine is still active, and that people are still dying.

While he was on the front line last week a soldier was killed and four were wounded.

Our security assistance is critical.

Nothing bad every happened, except for, you know, the undermining of all our foreign policy professionals around the world, and of our commitment to Ukraine in the Kremlin's eyes.

Nahal Toosi @nahaltoosi
Jim Jordan is arguing that because the Ukrainians eventually got their aid and they never announced "investigations" that nothing bad ever happened in the run up to that.

Taylor: "While the aid was on hold, we shook the confidence of a close partner in our reliability."

This is the underpinning of why making aid contingent on political investigations is so upsetting to public servants. It is an endangerment to our national security.

Kent: "[A White House meeting] would primarily boost [Zelensky's] negotiating position with Vladimir Putin to end the Russian occupation of 7% of Ukraine's territory."

1 · 8 · 18

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · Seuraa

Taylor explains some Ukrainians' resistence to Trump: "In 2016 candidate Trump made a statement that it was possible he would allow Crimea would go back to Russia...What I can tell you, Mr. Nunes, is that that sentiment is amazingly inflammatory to all Ukrainians."

The point that Taylor is making, in particular, is the Ukrainian Amb. Chaly wrote an op-ed not disparaging Trump, but "defending his country's territorial integrity."

Taylor explains some Ukrainians' resistence to Trump: "In 2016 candidate Trump made a statement that it was possible he would allow Crimea would go back to Russia...What I can tell you, Mr. Nunes, is that that sentiment is amazingly inflammatory to all Ukrainians."

The point that Taylor is making, in particular, is the Ukrainian Amb. Chaly wrote an op-ed not disparaging Trump, but "defending his country's territorial integrity."

I mean, IMO the point of this tweet is that everything that's happened over the past few months (not just "Trump's tweets") taken together is difficult to swallow. I'm not sure how this sort of contrarianism is helpful to fixing what's happening today...

And Engel's sources are likely natsec officials who are probably appalled at the terrible treatment of a decorated career foreign service officer. No one is calling it a war crime, but we shouldn't downplay it either.

I mean, IMO the point of this tweet is that everything that's happened over the past few months (not just "Trump's tweets") taken together is difficult to swallow. I'm not sure how this sort of contrarianism is helpful to fixing what's happening today...

Richard Engel @RichardEngel

The more I talk to sources, the more I'm hearing America's betrayal of the Kurds, and the humiliation, "misogynistic" "squashing" of US ambassador in Ukraine for political motivations makes people think, we, Americans, have become the "bad guys." Hearing it was gut punch

And Engel's sources are likely natsec officials who are probably appalled at the terrible treatment of a decorated career foreign service officer. No one is calling it a war crime, but we shouldn't downplay it either.

Officials there initially were unaware of the CrowdStrike assertions. After investigating, they determined that CrowdStrike misinterpreted their data and hadn't reached out beforehand for comment or clarification.

In a statement to VOA, the institute flatly rejected the assertion of artillery combat losses.

"The CrowdStrike report uses our data, but the inferences and analysis drawn from that data belong solely to the report's authors," the IISS said. "The inference they make that reductions in Ukrainian D-30 artillery holdings between 2013 and 2016 were primarily the result of combat losses is not a conclusion that we have ever suggested ourselves, nor one we believe to be accurate."

I think it's important to underline how strange and unfortunate it was that no high-level White House official attended Zelensky's inauguration. He had just won a historic majority in Ukraine's cleanest election ever, and the US message was "here are a few diplomats."

Have to say this statement from Schiff is pretty stirring. This should be required viewing for anyone trying to understand this inquiry and the players involved.

"Ukraine is fighting our fight, against the Russians, against their expansionism. That's our fight too."

Rep. Nunes claims that by claiming the US-Ukraine relationship has been undermined by Trump's actions, democrats are calling Zelensky a liar. Actually, they're just saying what he can't, for fear of jeopardizing any further bipartisan support for Ukraine.

I really bristle at the question "Corruption is endemic in Ukraine, is it not?" in defense of "weaponizing corruption that we have sought to eliminate from Ukraine since 1991 for personal gain."

Also, really important point that Vindman just underlined: the European Union provides more assistance to Ukraine than the United States.

One thing often gets lost is that VP Pence met with Zelensky on Sept. 1 in Poland because Trump refused to go... citing hurricane that actually did not prove to be a big hit on the US (remember Sharpiegate?)

Neither Russians or Ukrainians use "the" at all. Articles don't exist in Slavic languages. The preposition is already part of the name of the country. "u kraya" means "at [the] edge" in Russian/Slavic languages. "U" means "at." No one says "v kraya." "V" means "in."

I happen to speak Russian and Ukrainian but clearly didn't know that neither language uses articles in the original...

Clearly am referencing the translation of both expressions, but thanks for your valiant service correcting me on Twitter.

An eye roll moment for Americans (if we believe this description) could still be interpreted very differently by Ukrainians. Take it from someone who has told a great many theoretically eye roll-inducing jokes that have fallen flat on their faces in multilingual contexts 🤦‍♀️

Laura Rozen @lrozen
Volker refers to Sondland bringing up investigations for WH meeting at July 10 meeting an "eye roll moment."

One line of contrarian questioning in the hearings has been "but the Ukrainians got the reforms done anyway, so no harm done, right?"

Here's why that's immaterial: (1/)

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia Follow

Ukraine can reform all it wants, but those reforms won't yield the ultimate prize -- Euroatlantic integration -- until Russia deoccupies Crimea and and the Donbas.

Deoccupation and peace have been jeopardized by the delay of aid. (2/)

Why? Putin respects strength & consistency. The US has shown neither in these dealings. We've hung our ally — which has been resisting Russian aggression to the tune of 13k lives over the past 5 yrs — out to dry. Zelensky has reason to doubt our commitment to him. (3/)

The Zelensky administration is reforming despite the delay in aid.

They will keep seeking our partnership despite the tension in our relationship.

They will try to end the war despite all the ways we've made achieving their goals more difficult.

That's just Ukraine. (4/)

Anticipating a lot of questions for Dr. Hill this Friday about her assessment of Lt Col Vindman, who the Republicans are trying to paint as un-American and a "leaker." Hard to imagine that someone who has been a lifelong military officer would "not respect the chain of command."

The idea that Nunes is putting forward that Leshchenko and Chaly were "high ranking" Ukrainian officials is preposterous. And the fact that Avakov ridiculed Trump? Most republicans did that during the 2016 campaign.

Fairly hilarious to me that there is such an emphasis on the post-WH meeting picture, as if it exonerates what happened in the meeting.

Ukrainians love taking pictures. If there isn't a picture, it didn't happen. They would take a picture no matter how the meeting went. The end.

And now he's using the attack on Angela Merkel from the July 25 phone call as a defense that Trump was right about holding the aid

I always read this as a reminder to Zelensky "we are your only friend" before turning the screws and saying things aren't reciprocal so

The President: Well it's very nice of you to say that. I will say that we do a lot for Ukraine. We spend a lot of effort and a lot of time. Much more than the European countries are doing and they should be helping you more than they are. Germany does almost nothing for you. All they do is talk and I think it's something that you should really ask them about. When I was speaking to Angela Merkel she talks Ukraine, but she doesn't do anything. A lot of the European countries are the same way so I think it's something you want to look at but the United States has been very very good to Ukraine. I wouldn't say that it's reciprocal necessarily because things are happening that are not good but the United States has been very very good to Ukraine.

I dispute the Republican characterization that no Ukrainians felt pressured or used by the holdup of aid and the meeting.

A tidbit from my September @POLITICOMag story:

polit co.com/magazine/story ...

There are reasons to believe Zelensky's slippery answers to President Trump's repeated requests that he investigate former Vice President Joe Biden and his son Hunter were deliberate. According to congressional staff who recently visited Ukraine and spoke with senior Ukrainian officials, the Zelensky administration was upset at feeling that it was being used and didn't want to be a pawn in America's domestic political machinations. In the phone call and at the meeting of the two presidents Wednesday at the U.N. General Assembly, Zelensky was careful not to let the name Biden cross his lips. Instead, Zelensky says he will "look into the situation" related to Burisma, the company on whose board Hunter Biden sat, more generally. At the U.N., Zelensky also mentioned a few of the other important cases he hoped his new prosecutor would investigate in addition to Burisma, and maintained that

George Kent's deposition has been released. You can find it and key excerpts here:

Notable for Ukraine watchers: he testifies that Porokhobots were attacking him and Amb Y as the scandal started in late March

A. Well, in Ukraine, very clearly, the prosecutor general at the time, Yuriy Lutsenko, his press spokeswoman retweeted the tweet of Don Trump, Jr. attacking the Ambassador. So very clearly, it wasn't just him personally as a Ukrainian, but the institution. There were -- I made references earlier to what were known as the Porokhobots, the trolls on social media who were active in support of Poroshenko. And 10 days before the election, rather than attacking Russia or attacking his political opponents, as they normally did, they were attacking Ambassador Yovanovitch and me by name. So I would say that is [the] cluster of the Ukrainians who were actively promoting this campaign. And then obviously the people in the United States that were promoting it.

6 19 26

Ratilda Hoyden @RatildaHoyden · 5h

I can try to explain this thing, it's actually more simple than non-Ukrainian speakers, like you and Mr Kent think. Thread

1. Any person who voted for, or has been supporting Poroshenko's agenda is called Porokhobot by the Ukrainian voters who didn't vote for Poroshenko

This is. chef's kiss:

Based on questions and statements I have heard, some of you on this committee appear to believe that Russia and its security services did not conduct a campaign against our country—and that perhaps, somehow, for some reason, Ukraine did. This is a fictional narrative that has been perpetrated and propagated by the Russian security services themselves.

Hill closes with:

"we must not let domestic politics stop us from defending ourselves against the foreign powers who truly wish us harm."

I hope the Members of the Committee heed her advice.

Hill is one of the foremost experts in the world on Russia. She wrote THE BOOK on Putin. She deserves to be treated with respect.

Castor questioning Hill about her stance on whether or not a Trump-Zelensky call should have taken place. Her opinion is that it should not have been pursued without a "fulsome bilateral agenda." This isn't a ding on Ukraine, I understand it to be a ding on Trump's intentions.

Andrew Haney @Andy_Haney · 15m
Regardless of her stance it's not her decision to make. She also opposed sending Javelins to Ukraine, while other experts were testifying they're extremely important because Ukrainians were being killed.

She is part of the policymaking process. It's her job to advise the president on exactly these matters. That's how policymaking works.

Furthermore, the Javelins are about rhetorical support. None of them have been deployed to the front lines. Dr. Hill's position was more circumspect and she is allowed to express that opinion as an adviser to POTUS (who, by the way, also didn't want to give the Javelins)

Isn't Ukraine a sovereign nation? Why doesn't it provide for its own defense?

Mister Kentaur @MrKentauros 13h
Just because a nation is sovereign doesn't mean they have the ability to defend themselves against other nations. And having to constantly fend off Russia's armed forces is NO easy task for any country. We're also aiding Ukraine economically as well, so there's that too

FiddleDeeDee @FiddleDeeDee 18m

This piece completely misses the point on a lot of levels. The rhetorical support is the most important thing the aid gives. The fact that it ends on the note of "no harm no foul, look! Zelensky is heading into piece talks with Putin!" blows my mind.

I'm not of the view and suspect Uri isn't, either that the aid shouldn't be, or shouldn't have been, provided. The piece, it seems to me, mainly questions the exaggeration by House Dems of the aid's importance for U.S. national security and the liberal international order

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia Follow

Replying to

I don't think the House Dems deserve blame here. Until VERY recently the Republicans were even more bullish than the Dems on this and other aid for Ukraine. And as I said before, it's not exaggeration to underscore the aid's massive rhetorical significance.

My next tweet pointed out the difference in the parties' attitudes and my emphasis is not on exaggeration of its significance for Ukraine, it's on exaggeration of its significance for the U.S.

I'm not of the view — and I suspect Un isn't, either — that the aid shouldn't be, or shouldn't have been, provided. The piece, it seems to me, mainly questions the exaggeration by House Dems of the aid's importance for U.S. national security and the liberal international order

пигманович @ncolnpigman 12m

Un, in my reading, also suggests that House Dems reflexively shifted from caution under Obama to support for the provision of lethal weapons under Trump in response to his skepticism of support for Ukraine, rather than on the basis of a reassessment of the merits of such aid

пигманович @ncolnpigman 11m

Ukraine is one of several foreign policy issues on which Dems have changed tack purely or largely in opposition to Trump. I appreciate that the piece points this out, something that is possible to do while supporting impeachment and/or the provision of assistance to Ukraine, imo Dems haven't changed on this one bit. Obama policy didn't reflect the view of the entire Democratic Party.

Why there are always Polish name under the Russophobic smears? Are we back to the 19th century America where Brits are trashing Irish and such? WASPs are trashing papists and so on? Where is the PC when it comes to "Russians". Did Polish folks forgot how they were laughed at?

It also annoys me that the top line media are reporting on this study is "it didn't work" while mostly completely overlooking the fact that it's based on twitter data which is, to say the least, not representative of the american public

I think that's an important distinction, which is why we specified "on Twitter" in the headline and raised caveats in the story. But I'm genuinely curious if you think there was a better way to frame the study in a headline than by factually reporting its top-line finding?

Not a subtweet of your coverage at all. I think your story was good, and your twitter thread did ment on the distinction, which I appreciated. It's the secondary reporting and tweets that lack that important nuance

My sadness is that the platform that most influences people in America is still so closed when it comes to data sharing.

I also totally agree with Siva's point- this has always been about targeting people who already believe what the IRA was pushing. It's not about conversion.

Yes, and while this doesn't invalidate that point, I do wish I'd better explained in my story that the study wasn't just about changing people's political affiliation or votes. It also looked at whether they became more entrenched or extreme in their partisanship. (They didn't.)

Big news for Ukraine, and important signal ahead of Zelensky's meeting with Putin tomorrow

Kristalina Georgieva @KGeorgieva

I had very constructive call w/ #Ukraine president @ZelenskyyUa today. I commended him for impressive progress in advancing reforms & was pleased to note IMF Staff reached agreement w/authorities on a new program for 5.5 $billion, subject to Board approval ow.ly/luq30pZUSN
